RUSH TO THE UNITED STATES.

COMPARISONS THAT SHOW HOW GREAT THE TIDE IS.

This City Alone Shelters 175,000 Itallans-Most of Them Prosper and Send Money Home-Congress and the Cab-Show the Chances for All.

The whole vocabulary of mankind contains no more alluring name than that of America. This country has attracted more home hunters than ever went anywhere else since the world began. All the other migrations of men are puny affairs in comparison with the movement to the United States: in fact, the grand totals of this unparalleled trek to the land of the free and the home of the brave are so staggering that mere figures do not convey their full significance to the mind. Let us make our similes without the aid of figures:

There are more Jews in the State of New York than were numbered among the hosts who followed Moses from Egypt to the Promised Land. The manner in which the subjects of the Kaiser have flocked to Yankeeland is indicated by the fact that there are nearly 700 newspapers in this country which are printed in the German language. There are so many French Canadians in Lowell, Mass., that they hold the balance of power in the municipal elections of that busy manufacturing centre. The Swedes are so thick in the Northwest that a Minneapolis newspaper recently offered the Bible printed in Swedish as a subscription premium, and there are so many Irishmen in New York city that each year 40,000 sons of Erin march in the parade on St. Patrick's day.

That the lure of America is not a myth is proved by the material condition of the 175,000 natives of Italy who now make their home in New York-a colony in a single community of the United States containing more Italians than there are in the city of Venice. These New York Italians possess property worth $60,000,000. They have more than $15,000,000 in the savings banks of Manhattan. They own 10,000 stores, 4,000 pieces of city real estate and they are increasing their substance every day. At the last Horse Show held in Madison Square Garden, an occasion when the richest flaunting their collection of jewels, the most resplendent of them all-was Miss Morosini, the daughter of an Italian banker.

As a rule it does not take long for the foreigner to prosper in epulent America.
If you inquire in all likelihood you will find that your servant gir is sending part of her wages to the home folks in Europe. The organ grinder and the banana man usually send a portion of their nickels and dimes to dependent ones on the other side and the sum total from such sources soon climbs into the millions. The enormous sums going from this country to Europe in this manner are shown by the post office reports. During the last fiscal year the United States sent postal money orders abroad to the amount of $62,987,788, and inasmuch as most business transactions are conducted through banks the bulk of the money order receipts is conceded to be nittances. Italians send more money home than any other class of adopted Americans. Last year they sent to their families and friends in Italy and to the Italian savings banks for deposit ever $13,000,000, which was an increase in one year of more than $4,000,000. Even the Greeks, who are few in number, sent home over $600,000 last year. As the Christmas season approaches the volume of cheap travel to Europe always increases christmas season approaches the volume of cheap travel to Europe always increases, Inquiry develops the fact that many foreigners visit their old home at intervals. Whenever there is a trike six the coal mines or at 227 of the large works where foreigners are employed there is an immediate exotus for Europe. Surely this is a land of planty when it rewards the alien laborer with a living for himself, assistance for his absent loved ones and holiday excursions across the Atlantic.

Last year we attracted more immigrants from Italy than from any other nation. Now, how does this wonderful United States compare with that country from which they came? Italy has a public debt of $78.55 per capita; the United States has a national debt of $13.51 per capita. Italy has a money directation per capita of $9.75, while the United States has a money directation per capita. In other words, should a direct and immediate tax be levied for the payment of our national debt (an impossible contingency, used merely for illustration) the United States could pay off its obligation and have a balance of $22.47 per capita, while Italy if she paid the whole amount of money in circulation would still owe $68.10 per capita, or about four-fifths of her whole debt.

A good illustration of the number of people coming to this country from Italy may be had by the following statement: If the immigration into the United States from Italy last year had been followed by an emigration from the United States from Italy last year had been followed by the residents in the great metropolis of the Middle West.

Since the foundation of our republic the magic of its name has drawn 25.000,000 men and women across the seas. If they had all come from Spain, Sweden and Norway there wouldn't be a single inhabitant left to-day in the three kingdoms mentioned. The movement to America is distinguished from all other migrations to the seas. If they had all come from Spain, Sweden and Norway there wouldn't be a single inhabitant left to-day in the three kingdoms ment proper but twenty-six persons to the square mile.

In searching history for comparisons of migrations it seems that the pilgrimage of the Israelites was the first great "trek" of which we have an authentic account. It is believed that there were about a million souls involved in that movement, which lasted forty years. During a similar period the United States has attracted 20,000,000 homeseekers, so that as a drawing card our country seems to outrank Canaan by twenty to one.

Caleb and Joshua told the Israelites the Promised Land was so rich that it was swing with milk and honey. Let us see how we can show up with Canaan on that score. Last year Uncle Sam's cows produced enough milk, butter and cheese to sell for $600,000,000, and our bees are ally producing $10,000,000 worth of honey, which would surely be enough to sweeten the "half baked cake of Ephraim." The proceeds of our annual tobacco crop would proceeds of our annual tobacco crop would reproduce the Temple of Solomon and add a few modern furnishings that this early spendthrift had not reckoned upon. In all the other migratious which have affected the history of the world the movement has been a conquering one. Weaker nations have been overrun by stronger ones. Sematimes cultivation has been superseded.

A Sale of "Used" Pianos. Remarkable for the QUALITY of the Instruments as Well as LOW PRICES.

CIVING A PRICE LIST OF PIANOS tells you very little indeed about the merit of the instruments. One Piano may well be worth twice as much as another, though both originally cost

There will be nearly one hundred Pianos here to-morrow, all marked at special prices. They are all in the class of "Used" Pianos. But they are so far above the ordinary class of Pianos offered in special sales that they make an event of the first importance.

All of these Pianos came to us in exchange for other instruments of our regular lines. The major part of them were turned in, in part payment for Loeser, Heller or Reiman PLAYER-PIANOS—the Pianos which are playable BOTH by hand and by aid of the perforated music roll. Dozens of these Pianos are so nearly new that it is practically impossible to distinguish them from Pianos never out of the warerooms. All of them are fine instruments and the prices are not only far below the prices for new instruments of the same makes, but Far Below Their Actual Worth.

Pianos keep coming to us all the time from Brooklyn homes. A large percentage of our sales of Player-Pianos are to people who already have a Piano, and of course want us to take it in part payment. So the "used" Pianos accumulate very fast, and we must adopt some method to insure their prompt dispersal.

It is for that reason that we have made low prices on these Pianos which are practically without precedent outside this Store for instruments of equal grade. It is for that reason that this Sale presents a chance to buy a Piano of a grade that is seldom offered under price at all.

Here is the list. But better than reading the list will be a visit to the Piano Store to-morrow morning, and a personal determination of the remarkable character of the Pianos in this Sale.

by barbarism. But the millions that come by barbarism. But the millions that come to America come not to conquer but to be conquered; not to change but to be changed. Since the civil war we have received 20,000,000 foreigners, and yet our nationality, our governmental system, our modes and thoughts and purposes are unchanged. Could the national individuality of any other people have been preserved under the same conditions? Suppose half a million Americans were to go into Germany each year for forty years.

The rapid assimilation of foreigners to our ideals is accomplished through the medium of the little red schoolhouse. Last year we gave free instruction in our public schools to as many pupils as there are inhabitants in the kingdom of Spain, that proud Spain which once ruled the world. Free educaton for nearly eighteen million pupils, and the number increasing all the while, with the extension of the laws compelling children to go to school whether they will or not.

The political equality in America, as well as the material advantages, tends to draw men to our shores. In many States immigrants are permitted to vote even before they are naturalized, merely by declaring their intention to become citizens. This great country of ours offers equal advantages to all. Senator Knute Neison of Minnesota, one of the most highly respected members of the Senate, was a poor boy in Norway. Anton Michalek, Republican Representative from Illinois, was born in Bohemia. Richard Bartholdt, a Republican leader in the House, was an immigrant from Germany. Bourke Cockran was born in Ireland and reared in France.

Another feature of the attractiveness of America is the absolute guarantee of religious freedom, not only to worship as one sees fit but to be privileged to participate in public life without discrimination on account of creed. Oscar Straus of President Roosevelt's Cabinet is a Jew, and so is Isidor Rayner, a Senator from Maryland. Charles J. Bonaparte of the Cabinet is a Roman Catholic. The President is a member of the Dutch Reformed Church, and so it goes.

"Looking up from his magazine the farmer said vehemently to his wife one night:
"Do you know what I'd have done if I had been Napoleon?"
"Yes, she answered. 'You'd have settled down in Corsica and spent your life grumbling about bad luck and hard times."

Tobacco Smoke Scared Deer, From the London Evening Standard. From the London Evening Standard.

A new way of preventing deer from doing damage to a holding has been adopted by the occupier of Haddon Farm, in the heart of the Devon and Somerset staghound country.

Discarding the use of tarred ropes and other strong smelling materials in fences, he walks through his turnip fields two or three times a night, smoking a strong pipe, the smell of which, he says, frightens the deer away. Before he adopted this device his farm used to be visited by scores of deer nightly.

UNSOCIABLE NEW YORK.

Indiana Weman's Impressions-Nebedy

Knows Anybody Else, She Writes. "What impresses me most in New York is the fact that nobody seems to know anybody else," the Indiana woman wrote home. When I came to visit Kate I expected to meet a number of pleasant people and be entertained by them, as she is when she visits me.

"As a matter of fact I have met nobody. The only woman acquaintance of hers I have seen was one we happened to meet in shop. Then Kate hurried me around the other way, because, she said, she only happened to know her because they sat at the next table in the apartment hotel where they used to live, and she did not care to keep up the acquaintance. "The reason for this seemed to be the fact that the woman always seemed to have got all her clothes last year. "I have been in every shop of any size in the city, and in nearly every department of each one. When interest flags Kate takes me to have my hair marcel waved, to the manicure, or even, as a last resort, to a Turkish bath. She is taking lessons in physical culture to keep down her flesh and studying theosophy under the most fashionable Swami in town.

"She has bridge lessons and attends a series of morning lectures upon the art of the fourteenth century and another on the the fourteenth century and another on the true ideals of Bach. At each of them etherial sandwiches and ansemic tea are served in china which looks as if it would orumple in your hand. But none of the women present betrays by the flicker of an eyelid her consciousness of the fact that there are others in the room.

"We lunch at restaurants of which we read in society novel; in Indiana and take

"We lunch at restaurants of which we read in society novels in Indiana and take tea at places which have no sign above the door, are located in out of the way side streets and never seem to lose the odor of violets worn by their patrons. Kate never, by any chance, knows any one personally; but sometimes in an excited whisper she points out a woman whose name is written among the first ten of the Four Hundred.

"That evening at dinner she tells her nusband about it and says what a lovely day we have had.

"Sometimes we dine at restaurants dearened by shrill music, where the only person to whom we can speak is the velvet shed waiter, who bright music and take the figure is the beauty doctor who waxes eloquent and persuasive over the very newest shade of hair.

"To-morrow I return to Indiana. Kate pities me; she says she would rather die than go back, and wants me to induce my husband to sell out his business and come to New York. As for me, I am counting the hours to train time.

"Not because I do not like New York, but because I do not like New York, but because I want to get back among people who know each other. Yee, I am going home, and the very first thing I do after I liss my husband will be to telephone to every woman I know to run over and have a sice, comfy talk."

a noted divorcée or a leading man in society drama with his next wife is pointed out to me with exaltation.

"Kate seems perfectly happy and her husband apparently enjoys it as much as she does. She wonders repeatedly whether the woman at the table back of us is or is not the beauty whose portrait is frequently printed. She also decides that her new hat with the huge rose in front and a little to the left is already out of style.

"Her husband's contribution to the gayety of the evening is the pointing out of a fat man whose business methods in the forming of subsidiary companies are about to be investigated. As for me, I am so homesick that I almost weep into my demitasse when I remember the jolly little chafing dish parties for ten after the Tues-day lecture on art which we give by turns at home in Indiana.

"Once we went to the opera, and Kate was well nigh hysterical with delight when she was able to fit names to half a dozen women in the boxes. 'There, when you go back to Indiana, you can tell them that you saw Mrs. Wastor and two of the Gouldorbilts,' she triumped.

"Yesterday we were invited to lunch with a woman we used to know in Indiana, who had heard of my presence in the city through letters. I expected a nice, homey time, talking of people we all knew; but I was disappointed.

We lunched in the public dining room of the apartment hotel, on made over dishes with French names. While we ate it our hostess and Kate discussed the trousseau of a bride whom Kate thought she had once seen.

After that they told each other how often they dined at fashionable restaurants and they direct at rashionable restaurants and how particular each one was to have a particular table engaged for her each time. When we went up stairs they compared all the new plays until it was time for us to go home.

Radical and Important Clearance of Women's Coats, Suits and Costumes.

THE FALL AND WINTER SEASONS brought to us a business in Women's Tailored Wear and Dresses far beyond even our own rather liberal estimates of what we might do. We prepared more largely than ever before. We maintained full stocks through the entire season.

And now to straighten stocks and to make room for the large gathering of Summer frocks already assembling for the Southland sojourners we make the most radical reductions on Women's and Misses' Outerwear that have ever been known in Brooklyn.

They represent the best styles and the best workmanship of the season. They are unequaled values at their original prices. And at the new prices, with almost three months of wear time ahead, they are chances few women will care to miss.
